green

sustainable architecture and landscape design

Fun Trip
A complex, personal home

Into The Void
Sculpted cottage reno

Soaked!
Inspiring modern bathrooms

Tricky Brief
A designer's own garden

Aust $11.95 Issue 37 NZ $13.95
www.greenmagazine.com.au 9 771834 806007 05

PLUS: MoMa Not your average market • Boatshed Getaway Hawkesbury daydreams

This family bathroom was reconfigured from an awkward layout. The design process was a reactive one that attempted to add a minimal but defined layer over the existing building fabric. Vertical joints and windows remained unchanged with new tiles and vanity inserted into the space. Along the wall where the vanity sits the lining was trimmed back to reveal the existing structure behind. The stainless steel vanity top was folded locally and fixed directly to the stud wall and can be unscrewed and recycled at the end of its life. Joinery was constructed locally by William McMahon and this included the "periscope" laundry chute, a repurposed exhaust duct. A built-in shower/bath, clad in Fibonacci terrazzo tiles with steps was created to allow the three kids to bath together and for a parent to sit next to them. Dorf WELS 5 Star mixer taps.

Kieron Gait Architects
kierongait.com.au